

SAVE ENERGY NEWSLETTER № 2

The SAVE ENERGY Project aims to transform the energy consumption behavior of public building users – focusing on public servants and citizens – by applying existing ICT-based solutions, specifically real-time information from building management systems and serious games, in an innovative user-driven perspective.

BECC2010: Behavlets and the use of pattern language for energy efficiency in European public buildings

The abstract entitled SAVE ENERGY: Behavlets and the use of pattern language for energy efficiency in European public building has been selected for an oral presentation at the 2010 Behavioral, Energy and Climate Change Conference. Read more...

Who is who in SAVE ENERGY project, Part 2

The SAVE ENERGY project brings together partners from 5 different pilot cities. The project brings together totally 15 partners - including public authorities, public agencies, universities, research institutes, SMEs and corporations . Each newsletter introduces in more details five of them; in this issue ISA, Metropolia, Green Net Finland, Lulea Technical Administration and Manchester Digital Development Agency. Read more...

What's new on SAVE ENERGY game Green My Place

SAVE ENERGY game Green My Place has hit the point of beta and the game is close to fully-featured. Read what is going on with the game development team and learn about the first prize in European Best Learning Game Competition. Read more...

SAVE ENERGY project is partially funded by the European Union, CIP PSP Grant Agreement no. 238882.

SAVE ENERGY: Driving consumer behaviour change

SAVE ENERGY aims to transform the energy consumption behaviour of public building users by applying existing ICT-based solutions, specifically energy management systems, serious games and real-time information about consumption in a user-friendly way, thereby empowering citizens to take decisions that lead to energy savings. Read more...

Extended Behavioral Study at Leiden City Hall pilot

Leiden University's Department of Social and Organizational Psychology has been involved the Leiden pilot development to extend the pilot by conventional sociological methods.

Read more...

SAVE ENERGY Conference 16-17 June 2011 in Helsinki

The project's final event, SAVE ENERGY Conference will be arranged in Helsinki, Finland 16-17 June 2011. Preliminary information about the event has now been published. Read more...

Project partners:

